Biographical Info Brett is originally from Cincinnati but has called Chicago home since 2011. He played for the Ohio Bobcats Football team and was in improv theater at Ohio University. Brett grew up involved in athletics, which translated into his passion for hard work and a competitive desire to provide the best possible experience for every client. Before joining the mortgage industry, Brett worked in logistics. He learned to prioritize communication, transparency, and a strong work ethic, which have been helpful in his mortgage career. He said he loves being a broker to provide the best value and flexibility to the many clients he works with. Brett understands that, traditionally, the home financing experience can be stressful, so having someone who has firsthand experience and extensive knowledge of industry programs makes a huge difference for those he has the pleasure of working with. His clients and industry partners all say that his hands-on approach, availability, and ability to educate clients about the home buying process are all part of why they love working with him. He knows clients don't always need answers during business hours, so he ensures he is a resource to them day and night, 7 days a week. He takes the time to educate his clients to empower them to make the best possible decision regarding their home financing. Brett currently resides in the city with his wife, two sons, and their French Bulldog mix pup, Sir Phillip. Outside of work, he can be found weight training, golfing (although he says he is terrible at it), traveling, and spending time with his family.
